Advice & Understanding About Medicinal Marijuana Use

Marijuana side effects come from smoking and consuming it. Side effects may influence the mind and body, and decrease mental acuity, increasing the likelihood for accidents. One shouldn't drink, drive or operate machinery or work at heights while using this medication. Prolonged use could lead to problems at school, work, present financial challenges or troubles domestically.

Marijuana use increases the likelihood of certain cardiorespiratory ailments; including, breathing difficulties, emphysema, increased heart rate and blood pressure.

Smoking marijuana can be damaging to the lungs and respiratory system. Vaporization or ingestion of cannabis may be a more beneficial means to administer medicinal marijuana.

Habitual marijuana use may alter the natural chemical balance of the brain, affecting pleasure centers and regulatory systems. Marijuana use may also alter metabolic processes such as increased appetite with undesired weight gain. Depression and addiction can occur from long-term marijuana use.

Other side effects of medicinal marijuana may not yet be recognized yet. I will not hold the doctor accountable towards any untoward side effects that may result from marijuana use.

Warning! The distribution, manufacture and possession of marijuana remains a federal crime in Colorado and the possession of a card provides no protection whatsoever against federal prosecution.
